

OITDA/TP 27/AA (2017 Ed. 1)

Application and technical information of optical deflectors

Summary

The optical deflector is a key optical component which controls a direction of a laser beam spatially. In recent years, by integrating such deflector with fiber optics technologies, the optical deflector can be used as highly value-added advanced optical components.

This technical paper reports various fields of application where the optical deflector can be used. It will also describe its terms, definitions, and properties as well as its applications for fiber optics.